447 Electoral Votes Shown For President On Incomplete Count

Popular Ballot Plurality Mounts to More Than Three Million; Willkie Refuses To Admit Defeat.

By The Associated Press.

Important pro-Willkie papers and Senator Charles L. McNary, the Republican vice presidential nominee, conceded the election of President Roosevelt to a third term todaybut Wendell L. Willkie, himself, doggedly refused to concede a thing.

Throughout a long evening, he watched the chief executive pile up leads in state after state to an electoral total of 447. His own strength shrank, meanwhile, to states having 84 electoral votes.

But, at 1:30 a. m. (12:30 a. m. Atlanta time), the Republican candidate retired, after telling his co-workers he never felt better. He announced that he would have no statement to make on the trend of the election until 9 a. m.

The popular vote, as compiled by The Associated Press at 3 a. m., E. S. T. (2 a. m. Atlanta time), from 76,392 of the country's 127,245 voting units was: Roosevelt, 17,061,280; Willkie, 13,779,002.

In a prepared statement issued at his Oregon home, Mc-Nary congratulated "Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Wallace" and wished them "grace and their administration prosperity."

Only Voteless City Sees Protests Against Lack of Franchise.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5 .- (AP) Washington was one city today where you couldn't vote, although it has thousands of voters.

As a result, the streets had a deserted look, for most of the voters were away. Some were legal residents of states and they went back home to vote. Others, who work in the District of Co-lumbia but live in near-by Vir-ginia or Maryland, just stayed home to vote.

U-Boats Peril Britain's Life, Says Churchill

Prime Minister Promises Offensive in 1943 and 1944.

LONDON, Nov. 5 .- (AP)-The people of Britain's island, dependent on their ships for their very existence, were told frankly today by Prime Minister Churchill that the increasing U-boat menace, if not stopped, will "touch the life of the state."

In a sober house of commons war review. Churchill declared the loss of more and more ships to German submarines was not a bit less formidable than the unending siege by air and warned "we must expect that next year a still heavier U-boat attack will be made upon us."

But, he promised: "We are making immense preparations of all kinds to meet them," and he counseled Britain to look forward to offensive campaigns "in 1943 and 1944."

Disney Is Here To Get Feel of 'Remus' Land

Famous Cartoonist To Do Movie on Immortal Characters.

By HAROLD MARTIN.

Walt Disney is in town today to look for a briar patch with a rabbit in it, to note how a Georgia sun sinks over a pine-clad Georgia hill, and to find, if possible, an old Negro sitting in front of a cabin door who will inquire into Disney's health by asking "An how is yo' coporosity sagaschuatin,

In other words, Walt Disney, the man who rode to wealth and fame on a mouse, is going to do the immortal stories of Uncle Remus as a picture, and he has come to find out how the land looks where Joel Chandler Harris' deathless characters lived and laughed and tricked each other.

The announcement that Disney definitely will do the Uncle Remus stories should bring joy to the hearts of many different kinds of people, in many different places. It will please a gentleman from Oxford, England, who wrote urging that it be done.

It will bring joy to the Roman Camp, Callendar, Scotland, from where Eleanor, Lady Esher, wrote to say that no story in all the world was quite so well adapted to the artistry of Disney as the stories of Joel Chandler Harris.

The climax to one of the strangest stories of all time took place in the superior courtroom of Judge John D. Humphries, where Robinson was scheduled to stand trial on a charge of assault with intent to murder and one of burglary.

In 1926, Robinson was indicted by the grand jury on a charge of attempting to murder H. W. Parker with a knife on January 28 of that year. Also, he was accused by the jurymen of burglarizing the Boulevard residence of Tom Nance on January 27, 1926.

But, after waiting all these years told the solicitor general he would not prosecute and that as far as he was concerned, the incident was closed.

And the state was unable to locate Tom Nance, whose home Robinson was charged with burglarizing in 1926.

Toxon Is What Beer
Means to Georgia

QURING the past fiscal year the brewing industry paid to the State of Georgia $1,187,352.30—or $3,253.02 a day-all of which was applied to the purchase of free school books for Georgia children.

Attention, City and County Taxpayers

This figure does not include the large sums paid to local governments, city and county, for licenses. If beer is sold in your county or municipality, information as to the amount of this local revenue can be obtained from your local tax officials.

10,000 Jobs in Georgia - $6,000,000 Payroll

Nor does the figure include taxes on the industry's huge investment in real and personal property—it represents only state beer excise and state license taxes. However, taxes represent only one of the contributions made to Georgia's economic welfare by beer, a beverage of moderation. Substantial investments in plants and equip-ment — employment, payrolls, a livelihood for tens of thousands of Georgians - all these are factors of farreaching significance.

Social Responsibility Also Recognized

But the brewing industry knows its obligations are not economic alone. It fully recognizes and readily accepts its social responsibility. Through this Committee, it vigorously carries on a program of self-regulation, cooperating with law enforcement officials in the elimination of undesirable outlets, thereby promoting wholesome conditions.

Britain Must Pacify Russia, Says Educator

Axis To Concentrate on Mediterranean, Laski Asserts.

By PROF. HAROLD J. LASKI. LONDON, Nov. 5.—(By Wireless)—The character of the dictators' policy for the second winter of the war now seems to be defining itself with some precision.

The center of the Axis attack is evidently to be the Mediterranean. Germany is to push through the Balkans to the Black sea, and Italy is to seek, through Egypt, to break the British hold on the middle east. It is reckoned that the threat of a dual attack by Germany and Japan will be sufficient to keep the Soviet Union neutral and, I suspect, they are calculating that if this policy is successful, the United States, intervention or no intervention, will not be able to assist in time.

An actual attempt at invasion of Great Britain is now unlikely before spring, but continuance of large-scale air attack is designed o damage our morale and inflict decisive blows on our war produc-

Britain Should Act. Clearly, the first part of the pro gram depends wholly upon the at-titude of the Soviet Union. The only two things we know about Russia with any assurance are its anxiety to keep out of the war and retention of its suspicions of Great Britain. It cannot, indeed, be to the advantage or even the safety of the Soviet Union to see the Fas-cists bring Greece and Bulgaria under their heel and be able to influence Turkey at their discretion. Still less is their advantage obvious in Fascist domination of the middle east. From this I infer that it is time for Britain to make a definite effort to remove the grounds for Soviet suspicions of its intentions if

The democracies and the Soviet Union between them hold the trump cards in a complicated game of power politics that is afoot. But they have to be willing to play them and they have to make it

At present, I think, the Soviet outlook is dominated by three con-siderations: Fear of a German victory, fear that Anglo-American supremacy may be a threat to her security, and anxiety, born of past suspicions and bad treatment, that her status as a great power should be amply recognized.

Fear of Nazis Wise.

Her fear of a German victory is wise. The fear of Anglo-American victory and her anxiety for a proper status ought not to be difficult to meet if there is the will to meet it. But there must be that will and it cannot come too soon to be effective. On its coming depends not only the attitude of Bulgaria and Greece; it is decisive also for the possibilities of Turkish policy in the next few months. For despite her goodwill and sincerity, it is obvious that Turkey cannot afford to pur-sue a course which the Soviet Union does not pretty fully en-

I see no sign that the air attack on Britain is succeeding in its purposes. It is ugly and no doubt cruel. Six thousand deaths in a month mean, on any showing, in-tense suffering, and the material damage leaves ugly gaps, especially in London and the Mersey-side. Their scale raises serious problems of administration, which problems of administration, which do not grow easier with the approach of winter, in health and shelter yet, having lived through them in London and having seen a good deal of the rest of England, I can testify that their effect on the morale of the population is to strengthen and not to weaken its endurance.

No Defeation.

No Defeatism.

The attack must always be set in the perspective of the French defeat, and Americans particular-ly must recognize that this defeat, as an index to the German methods of domination, has meant a resurgence of British spirit such as I have never seen in my life. There is no trace of defeatism in any section of the masses, save for a small occasional patch where the Communist policy today is nothing but a confused echo of what it believes to be the purpose what it believes to be the purpose of Moscow.

The attempt to damage our productive effort so far has failed. Injury has certainly been done, but it is quite inadequate both as to the scale of operations attempted and the volume necessary to impair our ability to go on building up our war strength.

If I had to summarize the outlook of the average man today in Britain, I should say that it is profoundly conscious of three

The Greeks Advance

Too much optimism over the war situation on the northern borders of Greece would be a mistake. It must be remembered that the Finns made a magnificent showing in the earlier stages of their defensive war with Russia, yet sheer weight of numbers and of material finally brought about the downfall of the heroic little country of the north.

The situation in the Greco-Italian conflict is, of course, different. It should be possible for Britain to send far more effective aid than was the case in the Russo-Finnish struggle. The geographical possibilities are far better from the viewpoint of Britain and of Greece. If Britain can spare a sizable force from the concentration of troops and equipment in Egypt, it may well be possible that the Italians have bitten off more than they can chew-unaided. There comes the rub. If Italy is hard pressed undoubtedly her ally, Germany, will send divisions to help, sufficient to crush Greece. That is, unless the stiff Grecian resistance, and successes scored by the British fleet and air force, bring about a change in policy by the Balkan states and, most important of all,

It is quite in the cards that if the Grecian adventure appears to be bringing disaster to Mussolini, Stalin will at last find the time ripe to step in against the Axis. It must never be forgotten that Stalin has no desire to see a too-strong Germany on his western border. It has been his policy throughout the war to wait and watch, hoping the contestants will so weaken themselves the Soviet will emerge the overwhelmingly strongest power in Europe or

. If Stalin thought one more push against Germany, by his forces, would be all necessary for the final humbling of the Nazi power, he is quite capable of applying that push.

There are immense possibilities in the fight for Greece. At present the successes seem to be preponderantly on the Grecian side. They have not only halted the first Italian campaign, but they have even pushed into Albanian territory themselves. It must be remembered too that, good fighters though the Albanians can be, they will not be inspired by much devotion to Italy, if Mussolini is depending upon them to any large extent.

Britain is reported building a large air base from which operations may easily be conducted against the Italian mainland. The British fleet will make a terrific drain upon all Italian troop movements, shipment of supplies and food which must go by water. And, once established in Greek bases, the British bombing planes can wreak havoc with Italian war industry and Italian cities.

There is much sympathy in this country for the Italian people. There is a feeling that they are helpless dupes in the gamble taken by the ugly partnership of Hitler and Mussolini. When Italy declared war on stricken France, she assumed the role of the jackal in the family of nations. The Italian people, in their secret hearts, must not relish this role. The Italians, as a people, have no love for Germans.

There will be heavy losses, for the Italians, in this new war adventure, Sorrow will reach . into thousands of Italian homes.

Mussolini has led his people far astray in his plottings with his co-conspirator, Adolf. His people will pay the price and, before the final chapter of the war story is written, they will need all the sympathy the world can give.

The Road to Success

The transition Georgia agriculture is undergoing is seldom better exemplified than in the story of Clyde Seawright and his father.

In this particular instance, the transition began in 1928 at Hart county's Nancy Hart Junior High school, where a course in vocational agriculture led to the purchase of a registered Jersey heifer. From that beginning, on a rented farm, has grown a herd of 22 registered Jerseys bringing a direct income of $40 a week to help pay for a farm bought in 1930. Income from the young herd helped pay the expenses of young Clyde at the College of Agriculture of the University of Georgia, and this added knowledge in turn has enabled father and son to extend their activities and

The farm bought in 1930 was not a particlarly desirable piece of land. The soil was worn out, the fields eroded. It had a yield of 150 pounds of lint cotton per acre. Today, with the use of manure and soil conservation practices, it has a base yield of 355 pounds per acre with 542 pounds per acre in 1939. The increased income has enabled building of improvements, which already comprise a milk house and milking shed, a water system from the barn and house, a trench silo, electric wiring for house and barn and, now, the construction of a new barn, as well as the purchase payments on the farm itself. They have sold cattle bringing them $250.

Seawright and his father are succeeding because they have learned the lesson of balanced agriculture. They have given more to the soil than they have taken from it. Their income is not derived from a single source. It is a year-around income that provides the margin for farm improvements and a diet that keeps stamina and mental power at a peak. The spark struck in a junior high school in 1928 now burns bright. When it has been multiplied a million times, Georgia will look back upon its Tobacco roads as nightmares of a

Advances in Health Programs

The report of the Georgia Department of Health indicating new record lows in the maternal death rate and the number of stillbirths this year is particularly gratifying in a year that has seen the virtual wiping out of the health services of an entire continent and the breakdown of human health in so many

Georgia has made great strides in recent years in the establishment of maternal and well-baby clinics, and the effect of this work is just now becoming effective. To be completely effective it must be extended even more, and it must be even though the entire resources of this land are thrown into either preparation for war or war itself.

While the state, through lack of resources and in some instances lack of interest, has lagged in health work, the record of the last score of years has been one of great advances, particularly in maternal care, both pre-natal and post-natal, child health work and malaria control activities. School programs have particularly been effective, and the advantages accruing to the citizens of the state have been

But there remains much to be done. Records in themselves mean little until they have been brought to the lowest point possible. Until that day comes, Georgia must continually strive to extend and improve her health service.

Editorial Symposium WARPLANES OVER EUROPE

"The last three European wars, including the current one, have been precipitated by Germany, yet the country's territory is now receiving its first destructive impression of what war means to inhabitants of an invaded country," says the MOBILE REGISTER, which adds: "Destruction of hundreds—possibly thousands—of buildings Germany and general suffering caused at this by the British bombers certainly should make every intelligent German reflect futility and barbarity of warfare and glut his desire for war created by the artificial crises and propaganda employed by Hitler since 1933." And the ARKANSAS GAZETTE, of Little Rock, points out that "For this sectond war with England Hitler prepared a new weapon in vast and swift armadas capable of leaping over Britain's naval defenses and spreading death and ruin in the British homeland. But the British have shown Germany that this terrible weapon thrusts two ways and that Berlin is inviolable no more."

"It is a lesson that the Germans have been asking for," says the SAN FRANCISCO CHRONI-CLE, which comments that "The British air raids on Berlin show the Germans that bombing cities is not a one-sided affair," while the LOS AN-GELES TIMES believes, "If the Nazis have attained air supremacy over England, it is apparent the R. A. F. has not heard about it." And the EL PASO TIMES declares that "British bombings of Berlin and of cities and military objectives all over northern Germany, Holland, Belgium, France and the ports of Norway tell an emphatic story to the civilian populations, and particularly to the people of Germany. They tell the German people that Britain is far from de-

THE CAPITAL PARADE

By JOSEPH ALSOP AND ROBERT KINTNER.

THE PRESIDENT WAS CONFIDENT, TOO WASHING-The only two men whose assurance never appeared to weaken throughout this campaign are Wendell L. Willkie and Franklin D. Roosevelt. No one who did not think he was going to win could put forth the gruelling effort Willkie has put forth. As for the President, although several of his staunchest henchmen were very much worried over Willkie's gains, he always predicted he would receive the "vote of confidence" he publicly asked for Saturday

In the hurly-burly of the last days, he even found time to soothe the fears of those around him. Only last week he gave the best part of the time between two stops on his campaign trip to cheering up Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes, whosordinarily redoubtable spirit had quailed before reports of the "Re publican trend." In truth, if anything, he has been considerably more serene since he began campaigning than he was before.

Those close to him say that during the last weeks of September and the first of October, the President did briefly lose his peace of mind about political matters. Letters were coming in from over the country, both from private persons and Democratic leaders beseeching him to take the stump. Every member of his personal entourage was urging him to get out and tell his story to the people. He was aware of the beginnings of the shift in national sentiment even before the Republicans or the poll-takers were. Yet he had let it be publicly known he would defer active campaigning until the two weeks before the voting. He wanted to campaign but he did not want to seem to be driven to do something he had said he would not. The conflict between the two desires made him a trifle grumpy and irritable.

SOBERING EXPERIENCE Unless they have changed their minds in the last 24 hours, the President's political experts have lately contributed to the calm od in which he prepared for the long evening of exciting waiting in the family dining room at Hyde Park, where he sat at the dining room table roughly tabulating the returns himself and directing his staff in a more precise calculation. After the President's first New York speech, Democratic National Chairman Ed Flynn reported tangible gains in the big, doubtful, perhaps crucial state, and over the weekend he presented a semi-final forecast showing something close to a sweep all over the country. Meanwhile, whether or no Flynn proves right, it is clear that the Republican upsurge has already affected the President's thinking, even if it has not shaken his assurance. In one direction, Willkie's yielding to isolationist pressure to make the so-called peace issue forced the President to answer Willkie's charge by promising peace. In another, the specter of political insecurity has represented the New Deal group around the President, who stopped planning to move into the defense effort, at the expense of the men now in charge, as soon as the election was over.

Although it is tragically bad international politics for the leaders of a nation to proclaim publicly that the nation is impotent, the Republican upsurge had, on the whole, fortunate results. For it taught the President and the men around him that they could not hope for national unity without reasonable concessions to those who The President ended the campaign, as Willkie did, with national unity and national strength foremost in

THE SAFE FORECAST These words are written as the American voters go to the polls. The result of the voting is utterly impossible to predict. But at least one prediction can safely be made. After the voting is over, the period of half-measures in national policy will also come to an end.

For then it will no longer be necessary to calculate the political repercussions of every step under consideration. The defense effort now being carried on as a mere supplement to the country's ordinary productive activity, will become the central fact in the national life. Whether the phrase used is 'total emergency," or "war basis," the industry of the United States will go on to a new footing, in which every other consideration will yield to considerations of rapidity and efficiency in the preparation of defense.

Meanwhile, American foreign policy will probably also grow The Mediterranean crisis, which has been constantly intensifying while America has talked politics, may present some unpleasant choices between action and inaction. To safeguard national interests and national safety, we may suddenly find ourselves preventively occupying the Spanish Atlantic islands, or forbidding the establishment of an Axis base at Dakar. These are things that will be done whoever is elected, for both the President and Willkie agree on the meaning of the international situation. Once there is agreement on the meaning of the processes at work in the world, the logic of events becomes inexorable. It is a mercy, at least, that the time of talking, of promising, of charging and countercharging, has come to an end, and that both candidates will now have leisure, once more, to consider the logic of events with due seriousness.

Roosevelt, has said that a journalist or com-mentator, operating in a presidential campaign, may be less respectful of the truth than a statesman having the responsibility of office. Admitting freely, but with regret, that journalism has been debased in this manner in this fight, particularly by adherents of the administration, who include, it will be noted, practically the entire roster of the gents' room of journalism, I would like to differ with Mrs. Roosevelt on the whole proposition.

The fact is that orators are no toriously indifferent to truth, and I know of no more synical show of concept for truth in this whole contest than the attempt of Mrs. Roosevelt's candidate and husban to rid himself of a long record of tolerance for Communists and fellow-travelers and identify them now with Wendell Willkie. I doubt that Willkie even knows any Communists or fellow-travelers other than those whom it was his misortune to encounter in the forces of the New Deal when he was of the New Deal when the fighting the attempt of that po-Americans whom he represented in business.

The whole campaign against Willkie has been based on lies. It was a lie to say or insinuate that he was the candidate of Adolf Hitler, and it was a lie to suggest that because he had been employed in the utilities industry he himself must be a thief because uel Insull was a crook. It would have been as logical to say that President Roosevelt was a crook pecause he and Tom Pendergast were contemporaneous politicians and party comrades.

In fact, it would have been more logical to More Logical say this, because we know that Pendergast was a member of the President's political team, that the New Deal accepted the benefits of Pendergast's vote stealing and other corrupt works and because, in end, it was not the New Deal but the Kansas City Star which exposed Pendergast and made his prosecution imperative.

It was a lie to cry "Wall Street" at Willkie without pointing out that Mr. Roosevelt himself in 1924 heartily indorsed a Democratic candidate who was a Wall Street man in the fullest and most sinister political sense of the term, and that Jimmy Roosevelt's insurance firm, of which Mrs. Roosevelt has been an officer, maintains offices in the Wall Street section and has had profitable dealings with corporations of the type which po-litical orators call the "interests." A lie may be negative as well as positive, or a half-truth may be seeking to escape from talk of politics, I am fleeing to the soft-lit tea-salon of the Messrs. Hanjaras as soon as this is done. THE ISLES OF GREECE It is late in the afternoon, and

WORD MORE ONE

The faces of the Messrs. Hanjaras, when last I saw them, were remindful of one of those neon lights which flicker on and off-now red, now black, now red, now black. In like manner did hope and despair move across the faces of these two Greek-Americans. In Albania the kilted troops of the Greek mountains were driving back the Italians. In the mountains the Albanian rebels were showing their great love for the Italians who had "saved" them, blowing up bridges to hinder the Italian advance. But over in Germany the German leaders were cursing their Italian allies, whose fighting record is not too good.

Two things may happen. The Italians, by simple pressure of numbers and superiority of equipment, eventually can win. The Germans can throw in enough air force to assist. If necessary, they can throw in soldiers.

Germany can't afford to let Italy lose.

All the world is thrilling to the fight of the small Greek nation as it fights one of the Fascist powers of the world. The Greeks were going along peaceably, living their own lives. The false border agitation was as false as the charge that Ethiopia was attacking Italy; as false as the charge Albania was a threat; as false as the whole setup of the two Fascist nations, Italy and Germany.

THE MOUNTAINS LOOK ON MARATHON I hope that the jaras have some Greek cheese and olives and some retsina wine to go along with the tea.

When the tea is brought, we will lift the cups and repeat:

"The Isles of Greece, the Isles of Greece! Where burning Sappho loved and sung, Where grew the arts of war and peace,— Where Delos rose, and Phoebus sprung! Eternal summer gilds them yet, But all, except their sun, is set. . . .

"The mountains look on Marathon-And Marathon looks on the sea; And musing there an hour alone, I dreamed that Greece still might be free; For standing on the Persians' grave, I could not deem myself a slave. . . .

"Must we but weep o'er days more blest? Must we but blush?-Our fathers bled. Earth! render back from out thy breast A remnant of our Spartan dead Of the three hundred grant but three, To make a new Thermopylae!

This was how George Gordon Byron sang about the Isles of Greece, and the song always touches the Hanjaras brothers very deeply indeed. And now that the Greeks are smacking the Italians around, the song is even more exciting, even though the Germans be about ready to send help to their Italian friends. There will be such retsina wine drunk this week as the local Greeks, all fine citizens, toast the army of their country.

The spirit of Thermopylae is not dead. The spirit of the Spartan dead still lives.

TURBULENT HISTORY Greek history, ancient and modern, has been turbulent. There was a turbulent period of internal strife before the first World War. King Constantine ascended the throne in early 1913, troubles left by the Balkan war begun to settle before the first World War came.

Constantine leaned toward Germany. Premier Venizelos fafored war on the side of the Allies. Greece remained neutral, but Venizelos established a government in Salonica and in 1917 King Constantine was forced to leave the country.

In 1919 England began to agitate the Greeks, and it was an easy task against the Turks. By 1923 the war, then three years old, resulted in defeat because of the high quality of the newly organized Turkish army under the amazing Mustapha Kemal. Smyrna was lost. Venizelos left the country along with the King and Crown Prince.

The army tried to rule, but it was necessary to call back Venizelos, and he again established order. Once established, he retired, but was called back in 1936 when a new revolution broke out. He accepted the leadership of the revolution. The Royalists won when a former compatriot of Venizelos left him and threw his support with the other side. Venizelos fled to Italy and thence to France, where he died in exile.

He had helped to destroy the royal house, which he disliked. But before his death the tired old man, one of the great men of Europe, was slowly finding his way back to royalism. Death halted

General Metaxas, who rules with a strong hand, had established peace and a measure of prosperity. Greece was more stable than she had been in several decades when Italy began to foment trouble to make an excuse for invasion.

So, Greece fights and that part of the world which still believes in fair play applauds as the fighting Greeks, kilted as are the Scottish Highlanders, drive back the Italian Fascists.

When You Train the Dog to Attack, You Assume the Blame When It Kills

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Old-timers who described some unpopular neighbor as a selfmade lunatic may have been more accurate than they realized. There was a man on our street whose "uncontrollable temper," like other evils, fed upon itself. When he began to chastise one of his sons, he apparently felt no greater wrath than other parents who use the rod; but his own violence increased his rage, and the weight of his blows multiplied until some adult's merciful intervention saved him from a greater crime.

Any violent act prompted by temper seemed to deprive him of all reason, for on one occasion he slapped a valuable pet for some trivial offense and instantly leaped upon it in murderous frenzy and trampled it to death. Was he insane? In the end, yes; but not in the beginning, when he first discovered the purpose and worth of temper. In pioneer days, and in primitive settlements of a later period. with their boots and their teeth, there were wild and illiterate fellows, who never had heard of adrenal glands, who nevertheless learned by experience that something within them added fuel to their rage, if given encouragement, and served as well as liquor to overcome caution and fear and make the insensitive to pain.

Nature gave us temper as a useful tool and protection, but like all other natural capacities, it becomes a curse when abused. When a man gives way to temper, he loses self-control; and a man who cannot control himself is insane.

A thing done once is more easily done the second time, and further repetition soon develops a behavior pattern that makes the act almost automatic and mechanical. Thus surrender to temper becomes easier with practice, so that loss of control becomes a habit and the tragic result is in truth a "self-made lunatic."

We Americans have a right to be proud of the contributions which our ancestors brought from the lands of their origin. Being of Greek extraction, I think highly of the Grecian heritages. That is only natural.

But now let me express my pinion, and what I know to be a frustrated belief of most secondgeneration (so called) Greek-Americans.

Our love is not divided between Greece and America, as your article states. We don't cherish and adhere to the customs of the land of our forefathers. We don't wish to live in a Greek social world. We don't wish to be told whom to marry. We don't wish to share the cliquishness of the older generation, which, while it basks in the sunshine of American freedom, refuses to assimilate itself. In this way you and I get all the facts and the warnings and the cheerings which equip us to protect ourselves.

Knowing what is going on enables us to protect our liberties, our pocketbooks and our pride.

But wait a minute. Who discovers and spreads the news?

Our newspapers do it, of course. It is a big, complex world. Only through the medium of the newspapers can we possibly keep up with what is actually going on. In this very issue of this newspaper, if you'll look, you can see all the world full of sinners and an occasional saint, reported with surprising accuracy.

Perhaps the accuracy is due to the fact that the papers watch each other, but that's a safeguard, too.

I want to remind you, though, that I'm speaking of American newspapers. If we had a dictator who did all the watching, you can be pretty sure that he'd be watching the other fellow and not himself.

The sins of others and the saintliness of himself and his satellites would make up the content of the papers in this country.

And so, in a sinful world, about the only safeguard for liberty we have is the privilege of watching each other.

And the man who values his democratic right to punish bad government and penalize faltering business will fight for his right to our kind of newspapers.

However, the bright side is that he wants to reward good government and sound business-and the same newspapers bring him the list of saints also.

NOTE: The purpose of these regular Tuesday institutional advertisements is to make American life and American business better. Your suggestions, criticisms or reactions will be appreciated by the Newspaper Publishers Committee and its chairman. Address the committee in care of the Business Office of this paper.

World Full of Sinners

By NORMAN CHANDLER Chairman, Newspaper Publishers Committee

DERHAPS it is too bad-and then again maybe it is good—that we human beings have to watch each other.

If this world were full of saints, the dreams of all our idealists would be silly, for how could we move onward and upward from perfection?

But let's not waste time on that "if." You and I know the world's weaknesses, its human struggles, its unsatisfied wants. There's room enough yet for a lot of progress!

Here in America we do a very good job of watching each other. Let a public official err and his sins are promptly pointed out by his opponents. Let a citizen do a good or a bad deed and, if it touches our lives, it is duly recorded.

And if a merchant or a manufacturer has a good product, he proudly tells us. If he hasn't a good product, you can depend on it, his competitors will

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—(Wednes-day)—(UP)—Republican hopes of increasing party power in the United States senate were dimmed at midnight when United Press tabulations of election returns showed 12 Democratic senators en-joying a comfortable lead over G. O. P. opponents.

Thirty-six senate seats were at stake in yesterday's balloting.
A lone Democratic incumbent, Senator Peter G. Gerry of Rhode Island, a consistent opponent of most New Deal legislation, was trailing his opponent.

In New York, Senator James M. Mead defeated the Republican, Representative Bruce Barton.

Two Republican senators—Arthur H. Vandenberg, of Michigan, and Warren R. Austin, of Vermont,

Earlier in the day, three majority members of the upper chamber, Theodore G. Bilbo, Mississippi, Charles O. Andrews, Florida, and Harry Flood Byrd, Virginia—were elected without opposition. A fourth, Senator Tom Connally, of Texas, was so far ahead that state election authorities did not bother to tabulate the vote and conceded his re-election.

Although Democrats led in a dozen states, their margins were doubtful whether the final results would be known until tomorrow

In Connecticut, Senator Francis T. Maloney, Democrat, was only a few hundred votes in front of Paul L. Cornell.

Assistant Democratic Leader Sherman Minton, of Indiana, who had been conceded only a fight-ing chance to be returned to the upper chamber, led Raymond E. Willis, Republican, by 12,000. Guffey Far Ahead

Senator Joseph F. Guffey, Democrat, Pennsylvania, ardent New Dealer, was nearly 100,000 votes ahead of Jay Cooke, G. O. P. aspirant, with one-quarter of all precincts in the state tabulated. Senators Albert B. "Happy" Chandler, Democrat, Kentucky, and George Radcliffe, Democrat, Maryland, enjoyed smashing leads and appeared certain to win over Walter B. Smith and former Governor Harry W. Nice, respectively. Radcliff was 111,000 votes in the lead and Chandler, 56,000.

Republicans maintained their tight hold on Vermont seats by electing Governor George Aiken to succeed the late Senator Ernest W. Gibson, whose son has been serv-

DEKALB VOTES FOR ROOSEVELT

DeKalb county cast an over-whelming majority for Franklin Roosevelt yesterday, and with 18 of the county's 26 districts reporting, the President had received 8,211 votes and Wendell Willkin 1822

The early returns included the five heavy districts within the city limits of Atlanta, but did not include eight rural districts that usually cast a small, but almost unanimous Democratic vote.

Congressman Robert Ramspeck was assured of re-election support from DeKalb county as the totals in 15 districts gave him 7,748 votes as compared to 602 votes for Henry A. Alexander. Willkie's total was divided with 718 votes cast for him as a Republican candidate and 1,114 votes given him as an Independent Democrat. The Prohibition Party, headed by Roger Babson for President, had polled only 34 votes in DeKalb county, the largest dry county in Georgia. The Governor's race showed Edgene Talmadge was leading with 7,861 votes; J. L. R. Boyd with 29 votes, and Joseph M. Wallace with 4 votes, all tabulated in 11 districts. It was a record vote in the county, and will exceed the 1936 total when Franklin Roosevelt won 7,391 votes as compared to 1,137 votes cast for Alf M. Landon. In all election history, De-Kalb has gone Republican only once—in 1928 when Herbert Hoover carried it by a scant 97

Despite a steady rain which began falling late in the afternoon, both urban and rural voters were turning out in record numbers. It expected that at least twothirds of the county's 15,000 regisered voters cast ballots in the

Cook Balances State

Political observers, figuring that the state-wide vote usually is divided fairly evenly between Cook county and down-state, studied the figures in an attempt to calculate whether Willkie could ob-tain a plurality of sufficient size to overcome any margin Roosevelt eould build up in Chicago.

The early count confirmed predictions that the Republicans would attain an advantage downstate, while the Democrats would take the upper hand in Chicago.

In the race for the governorship and a United States senate seat, and a United States senate seat, the same pattern prevailed, with Harry B. Bad Weather Fails To Halt HeavyBalloting

Most of Nation Has Cold, Cloudy or Rainy Election Day.

By The United Press. Cloudy, cold, or rainy weather prevailed in most parts of the nation election day, but failed to cut down balloting which was reported the heaviest in years.

A storm centered over northern Michigan caused widespread cloudiness and brought light showers in scattered areas from the Great Lakes region southwestward to Texas. Light snows fell in sections of Nebraska, Iowa, the eastern Dakotas, and the upper Michigan peninsula. A cold air mass moving eastward over the north central states held temperatures in the low 40's.

20 Below Zero.

In the Tabernash (Col.) area voters went to the polls with the temperature 20 degrees below zero. Throughout the rest of Colo-rado, Wyoming and New Mexico, the weather was fair but cold. These states reported record-breaking balloting.

Indian summer weather brought voters to the polls in the New York city area at the rate of more than 100 an hour. Rural districts in upstate New York, despite threatening skies, also turned out a big vote.

Indiana and Illinois reported a record-shattering number of votes despite cold, dreary weather. In Chicago more than 1,200,000 of the city's 1,800,000 eligible voters had cast their ballots five hours after the polls opened, although the temperature was in the low 40's and a chilling wind whipped off Lake Michigan. Warm in South.

In the deep south the weather was warm but cloudy, with rain throughout Alabama. New Orthroughout Alabama. eans had cloudy weather with the temperature in the high 70s; Atlanta reported cloudy weather with the temperature in the low

MY DAY: A Peaceful Country Day By Eleanor Roosevelt.

HYDE PARK.—Yesterday was a thoroughly peaceful country day. All of us walked as a group and then I rode alone. We were a fairly big party for lunch and in the evening some of us dined with my mother-in-law. As we came out after dinner, the stars seemed to me to shine particularly bright, almost as they do on a western prairie. One star was particularly brilliant, and I wished again that I was more familiar with astronomy. When I put the light out on my sleeping porch, I found myself gazing through the bare branches of a tree at this par-ticular star. It seemed to rest on the top branch and all the other smaller stars seemed to light up all the other branches, as though I had a beautifully lit Christmas tree all to my

The next thing I knew was that I awoke to the soft pink-colored sky in the west, reflected from the sunrise. A beautiful autumn day is with us again to greet the President on his arrival this morning. We had hoped to see him here yesterday, but he telephoned that he felt he should return to Wash-

I have the last group of boys from the NYA project at Woodstock, coming over for a picnic lunch, and Secretary and Mrs. Morgenthau will join us. At 2 o'clock he will go with the President on the annual local campaign tour of Beacon, Newburgh, Kingston and Rhinebeck, which is always taken the day before

At the end of the Democratic broadcast tonight, the President is to be the closing speaker, so he thought he would give us his usual speech in Poughkeepsie. But 1,500 people signed a petition asking him not to go back on his usual custom in his county, so he is going to speak at Market street, outside the Nelson House, at 9:30 this evening. I hope to attend that meeting with him.

This afternoon I expect to drive up to Tivoli, my old home, to see to one or two things which my aunt, Mrs. David Gray, has asked me to do. Even though she is as far away as Ireland, she worries a little about the old place. She knows the house is falling to pieces, as all houses have a way of doing when a family does not live in them, no matter how careful the caretaker may be. In this case, the caretakers are very vigilant, but the house really needs fundamental repairs.

I saw some little stories yesterday by Daphne Du Maurier, published in the interests of moral rearmament. It seems to me that they are very charming, but they indicate a change in the teachings of this group; or is that all human teaching must conform to the necessities of circumstances? Only eternal verities stand un-changed in the face of all happenings.

Fishing Tarpon It distresses T. P. Ivy, of 885 Crew street, that there are some folks so skeptical as to doubt his story of the fishing tarpon. Recently Mr. Ivy read with great interest Ralph McGill's account of the setter pig, and he says his sympathy goes to the owner because no one will believe his story, either.

After you read Mr. Ivy's account of his Florida fishing trip I'm sure you will be convinced, one way or another-

I'M sure you will be convinced, one way or another"Just north of St. Augustine, Fla., I was fishing for small fish from a boat and the tarpon were jumping all about in the inlet, when one finally got tangled up in my line. Reeling it up to the boat, found I had nothing to land it with, so cut the line, and as I was rigging up another line the same tarpon came back to same side of boat, and jumped up several times, and I saw he had a 3-pound bass on the hook and wanted it off. In a few minutes it was back as in this time with a nice trout minutes it was back again, this time with a nice trout.

"And it kept this up until, with the rain water and live fish. And it kept this up until, with the rain water and live rish, the boat would stand no more. So I pulled up anchor and reached dock just in time to keep the boat from sinking. Yet there are some who seem to doubt my word about the 47 fish I brought in. So this is the reason I so sympathize with the owner of the hunting pig.

The Two Swedes Speaking of fishing, and it must be the weather that prompts such thoughts, there was the experience of the two Swedes off the coast of Georgia.

You may recall the dilemma of Olsen and Johnson. They found a very fine spot this day and at sundown their boat was teeming with finny trophies.

As they prepared to row to shore, Olsen told Johnson to be sure and mark the spot. Then they rowed to shore.

Reaching the boathouse, Olsen asked Johnson if he had marked the spot, and Johnson replied, "Yup, I marked it on the boat."

"Oh, you dumb Swede!" screamed Olsen. "How do you know we'll get the same boat tomorrow?"

HOW THEY LOOK

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—Moving along, in the seventh week of the season, toward the ides of November, there has been no considerable churning up. In the argument now under way it might be said that Cornell has shown a better combination in both offense and defense while Minnesota has scrambled through the rougher barrier against five strong teams. After all, Minnesota is the only team that has beaten Washington, Nebraska and North-western—which is the main answer. Up to Harmon and Michi-

This is strictly true of Stanford which meets Washington this week, and Texas A. and M. which has S. M. U. to face. Nothing should happen to Tennessee from now on, barring a hidden mine. Nothing will happen to Boston College or George-town until they meet in Boston a fortnight further on. The crash there will be terrific. From now on Nebraska and Fordnam should have the right

STAR STRUCK

After the Premiere Glory Sees Mark With Honey Newton at a Night Club

Tearing off her wedding gown, Glory Stevens declares she can't marry Arthur Landis—that she is going to Hollywood. She likes Arthur but since she was a little girl she has wanted to be an actress like her mother, who died when Clory was 13. She avoids her father and just catches a Chicago-Los Angeles train on which she meets Helen Jamison, who after a hard struggle, has won some recognition as a character actress. Helen advises Glory to return home, but somehow is impressed by the 19-year-old girl's determination and, calling herself a fool, suggests that Glory take a kitchenette apartment next to hers. Glory makes the rounds daily. When her money is gone, Helen sends her to Scottie Weston, her own agent, after telling him to discourage the girl and send her home. To Helen's surprise he gets Glory a job in the Sunset studio wardrobe department but the first day a pin in a jacket sleeve scratches Mona Greer and that temperamental star has Glory discharged. Scottle sends her to dramatic school and she is always seen with him at the important night spots, wearing gowns provided by William Van Liningham, Sunset's chief designer. After Mark Spencer, Scottie's handsome young lawer, meets Glory he is with her constantly. Allan Rhodes, popular screen lover, plays with her in her screen test and they fall in love, although Scottie has warned her against "that guy." She gets small parts in two pictures and moves to a better apartment. Allan leaves Hollywood—on business, he says—and Glory is worried because she doesn't hear from him. NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

INSTALLMENT XV.

During the excitement of the opening, Glory had no time to think. She watched the stars and the crowds that surged forward so eagerly to get a glimpse of their favorite. Some day she would be one of them, arriving in her own car, walking up the red carpet in front of the theater, pausing to say a few words into Soldiers May Be Given Sulfanilamide Tablets To Carry.

By THOMAS R. HENRY.

WASHINGTON, Nev. 5 .- The recruit entering the army in the present emergency will be given a hitherto undreamed of protection against the germs of disease which, in most wars of the past, have killed far more soldiers than enemy bullets.
